WISE GROWTH, SUSTAINED IMPACT
YOU’RE HELPING US END HOMELESSNESS.

Founded in 1988, Virginia Supportive Housing was the first nonprofit in Virginia to develop and provide permanent supportive housing for single adults experiencing homelessness. We follow the “Housing First” model, which calls for housing individuals first, then providing supportive services to help them maintain housing stability.

We customize those services according to each person’s needs. Services include: connecting clients to primary healthcare; helping them secure income, insurance, and benefits; providing case management, counseling, and skills training; assisting with mental or physical health recovery; and helping individuals overcome substance use disorders.

Our evidenced-based supportive housing model works: 98% of individuals we serve do not return to homelessness.

The mission of Virginia Supportive Housing (VSH) is to end homelessness by providing permanent housing and supportive services to the most vulnerable individuals in our society. We accomplish our mission by:

- Creating affordable, supportive housing opportunities by constructing new or rehabilitating old properties into apartments that VSH owns and operates and by partnering with private landlords to lease apartments to our clients.

- Offering comprehensive supportive services to help clients achieve housing, health, and economic stability.
Dear Partners,

Last year, we thanked you for helping us embark on a journey of transformation. This year, we thank you for helping us reach a stride that can navigate change and deliver results. Thus, our theme for 2016, Wise Growth, Sustained Impact. To us, this means:

- Serving our clients today in a way that meets the highest standards of care.
- Serving more clients tomorrow—and meeting the highest standards of care.
- Ensuring that service is sustainable because permanent supportive housing is our commitment.

In 2016, your gifts delivered impact. You enabled our staff to provide housing and help to 1,544 people—adults who have experienced homelessness, veterans in need of housing, and individuals living on incomes so low they would likely become homeless without you. Of the formerly homeless people you helped us serve, 98% remain stably housed.

Long histories of street homelessness coupled with poor health, physical, and mental disabilities make it impossible for our clients to maintain housing without your help. Rita’s gratitude puts your support into perspective. We’ve included her story, and the story of Father Carroll, a retired 82-year-old priest, to convey the profound difference you’re making.

On the growth side for 2016, you helped us keep up the pace. We opened Crescent Square in Virginia Beach. We made substantial progress in the construction of Church Street Station in Norfolk. And we moved forward with our plan to renovate and expand New Clay House in Richmond, which we opened in 1992, launching supportive housing in Virginia.

Of course, a lot of work remains. In the three regions we serve, 2,200 Virginians were homeless in 2016. We face uncertainty regarding federal funding. And serving this vulnerable population is filled with challenges. But our team is energized by your support and by our passion for this work. Thank you. Together, we are ending homelessness in Virginia.

Sincerely,

Allison Bogdanovic
Executive Director

In 2016, my husband Stefan and I welcomed the birth of our son Gabriel. As new parents, we want a future where everyone has opportunities for a safe, affordable home and to pursue their goals and dreams. Thank you for helping make that future possible.

PERSONAL IMPACT

As a young girl, Rita went to church, attended Catholic school, played volleyball and ran track, and worked. “I’ve always worked, since I was 13. Summer jobs after school, working in day care, cleaning the parks. I’ve just always been used to working.” Even during the years she spent sleeping on the streets and in shelters, the themes of church, school, and work have guided Rita’s life.
Rita dropped out of high school after becoming pregnant. Later, still in her teens, she worked loading and unloading container ships. As an adult, she cleaned, worked as a cook, drove a truck, and moved boxes in a warehouse. But circumstances stacked up against her. “I got injured on the job. I got behind on my rent, and I lost my apartment and everything.”

Though she was homeless, she continued to go to school and kept working. “I got through it with prayer. I stayed at a lot of churches. If I found a quarter on the ground, I would give it to the church. It wasn’t much, but to me, they made it possible to eat, and be safe from harm and danger.

That’s what brought me here today,” she says, referring to Oasis Social Ministry in Portsmouth, which helped her connect with Virginia Supportive Housing.

“It’s a blessing to be at Heron’s Landing and off the streets. I get support from Mr. Miller, the case manager, and others in the building.” The staff is helping Rita apply for social security, and connect with counselors who assist her in coping with the challenges she still faces.

“During the day, I keep my granddaughter. Even when I don’t have her, I try to keep busy.” Her daily to-do list includes studying the Bible, nurturing a windowsill full of plants, and helping to keep the building neat and tidy. “I live on the front, so if I see some trash in the grass, I go out and pick it up."

What’s next for Rita? “I’ve been thinking about that.” She wants to go back to work, and eventually move on. “Someone else may need this place.” But one item tops her list. “I would like to give back to all the people who helped me. They didn’t have to do it. I’d like to let them know how much I appreciate their help.”

DEEPER IMPACT

“The narrative I had always heard and believed is that chronically homeless individuals are not reachable because it’s their choice—but I learned that is simply not true.” Chris was describing his first tour of Virginia Supportive Housing more than 10 years ago with Alice Tousignant, the executive director from 1997-2013.
“The chronically homeless have multiple compounding issues, and traditional service delivery models often erect barriers between these individuals and the care they most need. For example, the idea that you have to be sober before you can access housing. Without housing first, it’s just not possible for people to break certain cycles. Once they’re housed, with supportive services, they can get real help with substance abuse and mental health issues.”

Chris’s first tour quickly turned into a long-term partnership. He has supported Virginia Supportive Housing (VSH) financially, served as a volunteer photographer, and helped guide the organization as a board member. “I know that every dollar I contribute has a multiplier effect in the community in terms of the dollars that don’t have to be spent on jail stays, or visits to the emergency room.”

But for Chris, it goes beyond the dollars to something deeper. “They’re helping a person recover human dignity.” One of his first volunteer projects with VSH was a before-and-after photography spread. “I photographed the place where one gentleman had lived downtown, under a bush. Then, I went to his apartment. He opened his door with this big smile and welcomed me into his home. That was powerful. You could see in his bearing what it meant to have that dignity restored.”

In the years since, Chris has helped shepherd VSH’s growth to ensure that impact continues. “Now, we’re taking the next step. We have a vision, we serve our clients well, and we’re creating an organization that is as excellent as the mission we’re delivering.”
When Father Carroll was serving as a missionary in Tanzania and Kenya, he opened a lot of conversations by saying, “Look, we’re here to help you—not tell you what to do. How can we help you?” The answers he heard compelled him to stay in Africa for 40 years, and later, guided him to Charlottesville and The Crossings, where he continues to make a difference.
Father Carroll, who took a vow of poverty, moved to The Crossings several years ago, settling into one of 30 units designated for individuals whose incomes are 50 percent or less of the area median income. The remaining 30 units serve formerly homeless people.

“Everything here is done so well. People need a home, and they’re grateful. And many of them have lived such difficult lives.” Father Carroll recalled a neighbor, who has since died. “I drove him to his medical appointments, and he would always offer to help me pay for gas. I told him to save his money for his boys, so they could go to college and have a better life.”

Father Carroll had seen that play out years before, in Africa. “This young boy’s mother asked me to help her get her son out of the slums and into college. Joseph was in high school and so brilliant.” Father Carroll encouraged Joseph to come to the U.S. and attend college in Minnesota, where he lived. Joseph did and eventually earned a full scholarship to the University of Virginia.

When Father Carroll retired, Joseph invited him to come to Charlottesville and live with him and his wife. Father Carroll accepted. “When they moved away for a job opportunity, I wanted to stay. I heard about The Crossings through my volunteer work. I talked with them, and they accepted me.”

At 82, Father Carroll still works at a food pantry, serves as an advocate for living wages, and is a surrogate grandfather to several families, including three from Africa—Swahili is his second language—as well as one from Afghanistan.

And he always makes time for his friends at The Crossings. Recently, a neighbor’s grandson asked about a famous photo on Father Carroll’s door of the young Syrian refugee whose body washed up on a Turkish beach. “I explained what happened to him, that the boy couldn’t swim and it was night. The little boy asked me, ‘Why didn’t someone help him?’” Father Carroll continued, “We should all be asking that question. We’re all sisters and brothers—we should always reach out to each other, whenever we can.”
Impact, mission maturity, and sustainability are among the attributes Penny McPherson, Vice President and Senior Community Development Officer at Wells Fargo, looks for in a nonprofit partner. They’re also the qualities she assigns to Virginia Supportive Housing (VSH). Penny and Wells Fargo have played a role in VSH’s growth and development over the last two decades.
“Ninety-eight percent. I know that by heart—and I’m not even on the board anymore.” Penny is reciting the percentage of people VSH serves who remain stably housed after one year. “That shows the work is being done and being done well. When we consider which organizations to support, we look at how the organization’s impact differentiates it.”

Over the 14 years Penny has worked with VSH, which includes six years serving on the board, she has watched the agency develop mission maturity. “Virginia Supportive Housing reminds me a little of the athlete who has found that sweet spot.” She compares VSH to Usain Bolt, the fastest sprinter in the world. “He found his sweet spot, what he’s really good at, and he’s won every race he’s completed.”

She also cites the organization’s ability to make strategic decisions. “It’s not just, ‘what can we do to exist for another year,’ but ‘what can we do to make a difference, and can we ensure our decisions are sustainable?’” Penny emphasizes the importance of developing specific expertise and increasing the skills and knowledge to strengthen that expertise—a trait she sees in VSH and applauds.

For Penny, a “home-grown Richmonder,” supporting VSH is also personal. “It matters to me that our home is taken care of—that we make sure our neighbors have what they need to not only function, but to live and to live well, to grow, and to be empowered as an individual. Stronger individuals create stronger networks that build a stronger community.”

“As a corporate donor, it gives me a sense of confidence when I talk about the work Virginia Supportive Housing is doing, because I know the organization is achieving its mission.”
In May 2017, Virginia Supportive Housing (VSH) received an unsolicited gift of $1 million from an anonymous donor—the largest single gift VSH has ever received at one time from an individual. We will count this gift in 2017 totals, but wish to express our gratitude in this report. We also are humbled by this generous donor’s words of confidence: “In our philanthropy, we have focused on smaller ‘under the radar’ organizations...where our contribution can make a very meaningful difference. Virginia Supportive Housing is definitely our kind of organization. It does absolutely amazing work with a population that clearly meets our criteria. We are just glad we can assist them in having such a positive impact on the lives of so many people.”

Sincerest THANKS to all our supporters

AESTHETIC IMPACT

When South Bay opened in 2010, it was our first new-construction community in the area—and our first to feature striking, original artwork throughout. Six years later, the walls of every Virginia Supportive Housing (VSH) community in the Hampton Roads region have been graced with original paintings created and donated by local and national artists specifically for our residents.
The project started when a group of artists who meet weekly began exploring the impact of art on the community. One member, who had heard about the new South Bay building, suggested they take their discussion a step further and provide original artwork for the space. Terri Gorman raised her hand to help and quickly found herself leading the way.

Today, five buildings later—a sixth, Church Street Station Studios, is in the works—and with the help of dozens of artists, Terri has provided the residents of every VSH community in the Hampton Roads region with more than 150 pieces of art commissioned for their buildings.

While the volunteer project looks more like a year-round, part-time job, Terri will tell you it’s worth it. “We have an opening event for each building, and the residents who speak are incredible.” She recalled one woman who had been living out of her car. After caring for her ailing parents for years, they died, and she found herself without skills, a family, or a home. “She was so grateful for the artwork. She couldn’t believe she was moving into this place with such beauty. For an artist, it’s very moving—very rewarding.”

Recently, Terri began working with an art class at her alma mater, Virginia Wesleyan University. The first cohort of students provided exceptional work, while also learning a little about homelessness, how easily it can happen, and how each of us can help. They’re also learning how to deliver work that complements a specific environment. They’re asked to use a palette that works with the surrounding space and to create abstracts or landscapes.

“The residents always have a story about their favorite painting. ‘That reminds me of my grandmother,’ or, ‘that reminds me of where I used to live.’ They share why it’s important to them—I think that’s the most inspiring thing for me as an artist.”

“I listen to residents. When I stop by, I usually have paintings and they will gather round and discuss—they like the beach scenes, landscapes. It’s not a scientific study, but that’s what they seem to like.” Terri continues, “My personal goal is to make a difference with my art. This is small, not huge, but it’s nice to think that I could make a difference and help someone have a little bit of pleasure.”
In 2016, 1,783 volunteers dedicated almost 9,200 hours of service for Virginia Supportive Housing. We cannot achieve our mission without the support and participation of community volunteers, especially in the categories of property beautification and client services. Volunteers provide enrichment for our formerly homeless residents and help give them a place they can be proud to call home!
